Holi is India's richest festival, a beautiful blend of vibrant colours and the great indulgence of celebrations that add life to the festive day. But while we are engrossed in celebrations, we also need to realise the importance of the environment around us. So to make people aware of the harms of chemical colours and the importance of water, our team of 15 volunteers from Eco-club Shyam Lal College on 2nd March 23 carried out an anti-chemical colour rally, door to door campaign in nearby areas of Shahdara, and interactive discussions to motivate students, teachers and community people to encourage them to play Holi with herbal colours and save water. They also distributed pamphlets to create awareness about Eco Holi. They urged the people to celebrate Holi in the way that Radha Rani celebrated in Braj thus highlighting the cultural aspects of the festival and promoting the celebration of Holi in an environmentally friendly manner.
