The Eco-Club (the_Last_Leaf) of Shyam Lal College, University of Delhi, in collaboration with the Department of Environment, NCT of Delhi, organized a two-day awareness program (21st-22nd March 2025) on the eve of World Water Day. The theme of the program was “Glacier Preservation” A Step toward water security and climate stability. A team of 40 student volunteers actively participated in the event.

As part of the program, Eco-Club volunteers visited schools in Shahdara to engage students on the role of youth in environmental conservation. They emphasized simple practices such as tree plantation, water conservation, and reducing plastic use. Through posters and interactive sessions, students gained awareness about the urgency of glacier preservation in an engaging manner.

Additionally, volunteers conducted a door-to-door campaign in the Shahdara area, explaining the dangers of unchecked glacier melting water scarcity, floods, and rising sea levels. Residents were encouraged to adopt eco-friendly habits such as saving water, using public transport, and minimizing waste. Personal interactions helped connect global issues like glacier melting with people’s everyday lives, fostering a sense of shared responsibility.

The two-day program effectively engaged students, households, and the local community, demonstrating that small local actions can create meaningful global climate impact. Eco-Club volunteers showed that awareness and community participation are powerful tools for protecting glaciers and securing a sustainable water future.
