ABOUT FDP

In a world confronting urgent sustainability challenges such as climate change, resource depletion, and social disparities, Higher Education Institutions bear a profound responsibility. They assume the pivotal role of agents for addressing these challenges by shaping the next generation of leaders and the workforce. However, it is imperative that faculty members are equipped with comprehensive training and resources to adeptly disseminate and investigate sustainability. This is essential because sustainability issues often transcend conventional disciplinary boundaries, necessitating an interdisciplinary approach to effectively grapple with their complexity. Furthermore, evolving societal expectations driven by students, parents, and employers now encompass an ardent demand for a sophisticated grasp of sustainability principles and competencies. Faculty members who partake in Faculty Development Programs (FDPs) are better positioned to meet these dynamic expectations, consequently elevating the quality and pertinence of higher education. It is noteworthy that sustainability is not confined to a solitary academic domain; it radiates across an array of subjects, thereby enriching the educational experience and priming students to emerge as conscientious global citizens, well-versed in the significance of sustainable practices.

In an era where institutional prestige and adherence to evolving regulatory requisites hold substantial weight, the strategic incorporation of Sustainability in Higher Education serves to bolster an institution's standing and ensures compliance with the continually shifting requirements. Lastly, FDPs impart enduring influence as they enable faculty members to transmit their profundity of understanding and zeal for sustainability to their students, thus nurturing a pervasive culture of sustainability within the realm of higher education.

OBJECTIVES OF FDP

- Comprehensive Exposure to Sustainability Strategies: Faculty members will be exposed to a diverse spectrum of strategies, concepts, and resources within the sustainability domain to foster a well-rounded understanding.
- Access to Global and National Sustainability Frameworks: Participants will gain access to both National and International Sustainability content and teaching methodologies, enabling a broad perspective on Sustainable Development.
- Empowerment to Infuse Sustainability into Teaching and Research: Faculty will develop the capability to incorporate sustainability principles into their teaching and research, fostering a sustainable perspective in their academic endeavors.
- Cultivation of an Interdisciplinary Mindset: Faculty members will be nurtured to cultivate an interdisciplinary mindset, especially when undertaking substantial projects, to address multifaceted sustainability challenges effectively.
