Our society eagerly participated in the vibrant Melange 30, a fest hosted by the esteemed Institute of Home Economics at the University of Delhi. With a mission to not only attend but actively engage with the festivities, we dispatched a dedicated team of four members. Their mandate included not only attending the fest but also setting up an enticing stall to showcase and promote our society's diverse projects – Swarnkrit, Sahajsmitta, and Pawshaak.

Swarnkrit, a creative endeavor under our society's umbrella, specializes in crafting exquisite jute products. Meanwhile, Sahajsmitta takes a sustainable approach, offering bamboo brushes that align with eco-friendly principles. Lastly, Pawshaak caters to our furry friends, crafting stylish and comfortable clothing for dogs. Each project embodies our commitment to creativity, sustainability, and compassion.

Our journey to the fest commenced at 10:30, and upon arrival, we promptly began organizing our stall. The logistics involved a nominal fee of 1000 for securing the stall space. This financial investment proved worthwhile as our stall witnessed a commendable turnout, generating sales amounting to approximately 2000. These proceeds not only covered the initial stall cost but also provided a positive boost to our society's financial standing.

Throughout the fest, our stall became a hub of activity, attracting attendees eager to explore and support our projects. The engaging conversations facilitated by our team helped raise awareness about Swarnkrit, Sahajsmitta, and Pawshaak. Visitors were not only patrons but also became advocates for our society's initiatives.

The fest proved to be a fruitful platform for networking, with interactions extending beyond the boundaries of our stall. We had the opportunity to connect with other societies, share experiences, and exchange ideas for future collaborations. This spirit of camaraderie enhanced the overall fest experience and left a lasting impression on our society members.

As the clock struck 4 pm, we gracefully concluded our active participation in Melange 30. The collective efforts of our team, combined with the positive reception from attendees, marked this fest as a success for our society. We left with a sense of accomplishment, having not only covered our stall costs but also expanded our reach and impact within the vibrant community of the University of Delhi.
